THE DISTRICT SOCIETIES

J. H. WHEELER, Supervisor of Districts

During the Autumn months it was my pleasure to visit each of the five districts at their annual meetings. Indulging in a bit of reminiscence I let my mind wander back to the early days of these meetings when none of us really knew what it was all about and were groping to find something that would make the idea blossom into something that was really worth while and that would prove the value of these five components of the parent society. After visiting several of these meetings each year and all of them this year, I feel that I can truthfully say that each one is functioning in an ideal manner; the men in each district are wide awake to their opportunities and working hard to accomplish something that will stand the test of time. I found clinics that would be a credit to a state meeting, papers that would stimulate thought in any gathering of dentists and an enthusiasm that was thoroughly contagious. I think that this contagion is manifest in the increased attendance upon the annual state meeting. Since the organization of these districts, our membership has been steadily increasing until at the present time we have on our roster approximately 550 members. Time has been when it took begging and almost "cussing" to get a decent attendance out to the meetings of the state society, but this has all changed; now it is only the few that stay away. There is a peculiar quirk in human nature that refuses to really appreciate something that we get for nothing, it is the thing that costs us something in time, effort or money that we really count worth while. These district societies have consciously or unconsciously put this idea over to practically all of us and the results are speaking for themselves.

We are into a job that will never be finished, an ideal that will always be a little ahead of us, giving us something to continually strive for and this fact should make us glad, for it is only in the striving that we get continuous joy. Ambitions realized are soon forgotten. My ambition for the North Carolina Dental Society is that each member shall make it his or her ambition to make this the best society in the whole world.

DR. I. R. SELF, President
LINCOLNTON, N. C.

FOREWORD

o The Members of The North Carolina Dental Society:—

GREETINGS:

In this issue of the Bulletin you will find the program for the State Meeting of the North Carolina Dental Society which will be held at Wrightsville Beach, North Carolina, June 10th, 11th, and 12th 1929, and it is the earnest desire of your state officers that every member of the Society be present throughout the entire meeting.

We are proud of the fact that the North Carolina Dental Society has the largest number of members enrolled of any state society in the Southeast and it behooves us to work even harder not only hold this record but to advance to higher honors. At Charlotte last year, over four hundred and fifty members were registered which was an excellent showing. This year, however, we hope to exceed that number and this necessarily means that each and every member of the Society should begin now to make plans to be present at Wrightsville.

Your committee has arranged a well balanced program of usual merit and it will be to your advantage to be present. This is essential for a successful meeting and your President and other officers urge you to attend and help make the Convention the success it should be.

I. R. SELF, President.

QUALITY VERSUS QUANTITY

There are two classes in almost everything—that class which stands for quality and the class that stands for quantity. Quality and Quantity in almost every instance there is one or the other to choose from definitely—with the exception of the North Carolina Dental Society—we must have both. No organization could progress without the members of quality behind it—we must have high thinkers—gogetters—and good workers—but we must also have a quantity of these qualities.

We are proud to boast the largest dental organization in the entire south—and without a quantity of members we would still be among those listed—not in the class we are, but the quality in its members are the reason—the success, the result.

Being on the inside as it were, I am in a position to judge not only from data accumulated as regards other organizations, but to view the efforts and results of our own members—and I am proud to be a member of so fine an organization.

The extensive course put on by the Northwestern University is one of the qualities—and the attendance the quantity.

The last meeting held at Wrightsville Beach in 1922 as compared with the program for the meeting this year is as lamps compared with electricity—we are progressing from every standpoint. I venture to say that 90% of our members have improved their profession and strive more for quality than quantity. Men who prefer a few outstanding jobs rather than a quantity of little jobs—quality men in other words—and yet we must have our quantities of quality workers to raise the Dental Profession where we want it and where it should be.

The Boswick course has proven to us a lot—and I am sure there will be more quality workers after taking the course than ever before.

There is nothing more outstanding in any profession than quality—and the dental profession in particular needs a quantity of quality workers. To continue to progress, it is the individual duty of every member to determine his future by the quantity of quality work.

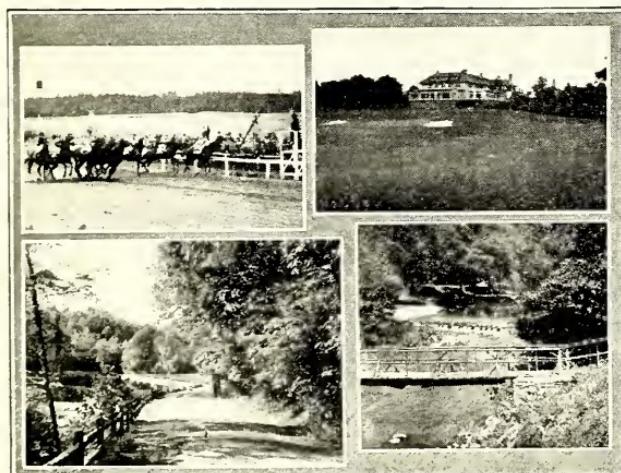

Webster has explained the word quality as "that which belongs to a thing and makes it what it is and different from other things." That I think could be explained as belonging to the North Carolina Dental Society—our dental society—to build and work for.

Washington is the ideal vacation city of the United States. Probably more Americans visit Washington for a vacation than any other city. Its attractions are so numerous that one could pass a month in Washington and be busy every minute. Many thousands of people from every part of the United States and from other parts of the world journey to the National Capital every year, but it is in the Spring and Fall that the city is over-run with visitors. In October, when the American Dental Association will hold its Seventy-first annual session, the weather is ideal. The mean temperature of Washington in October in the period between 1871 and 1928, has ranged from 52 to 63 degrees. Ordinarily the thermometer reaches 63 degrees during that month.

Every American hopes some day to see Washington. Its magnificent public buildings, its countless points of historic interest, its broad avenues, its beautiful parks, present prospect that no other city in the country can offer. Most persons know that the city of Washington was planned by Major Pierre L'Enfant, a distinguished French engineer and officer of the Continental Army. L'Enfant's plan was approved by President Washington and by Thomas Jefferson, his Secretary of State. In laying out the city, he had the assistance of several landscape engineers. Successive engineers and civic improvement artists have retained the principal feature of L'Enfant's plan. Today Washington has 490 parks, ten large ones in the central portion, one of the largest being the Mall, extending from the Botanic Gardens at the foot of the Capitol to the Washington monument. The crowning glory of the Washington park system, however, is to be found in Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park which adjoins. Together these parks contain 4776 acres. The natural beauty of the landscape has been preserved, and hundreds of beautiful spots throughout the park are frequented by picnickers. It has been said that no other city in the country has a more lovely natural park than Rock Creek.

There are so many things to see in Washington, so many attractions that it is impossible to recount them in detail. Various points of historic interest in the City and in the surrounding territory claim the visitor's attention. October is also Washington's own racing season, when during the entire season the racers can be seen at the splendid Laurel course, twenty miles from the city. Here rich stakes are decided every week-day and society can be seen at its best. This year the Laurel management announced that a special stake will be included in the program in honor of the visiting dentists.

A CHANGING FORMULA A NEVER-CHANGING POLICY

Thus Pepsodent continues to meet today's dental needs

PEPSODENT, since its introduction to the public, has been made and sold under a fixed and unchanging policy. To meet the LATEST medical and dental exactments as to what a dentifice should be and do, has been a constant aim.

Under such a policy there has never been a fixed formula for Pepsodent. As new discoveries are made and recommended in the realm of medical and dental science, the formula must be changed to embody them. Such changes have been made in the past and undoubtedly there will be others in the future. Science is never at a standstill.

The present Pepsoden formula offers complete cleansing and polishing of the teeth—in absolute safety to enamel. It not only removes, but it also retards the subsequent adherence of the mucin plaque. Mildly acid, it induces salivary flow—the natural protective fluid for the teeth. Gum protection is afforded through the calcium ion, acting as a remorative and antiphlogistic agent.

Such a formula, according to modern scientific opinion, meets precisely TODAY'S dental demands.

That is why Pepsodent enjoys the approval and recommendation of the profession itself.

Solve the big problem of Appearance

*A*PPPEARANCE! It's a benefaction. When the patient's point of view is properly appraised and the dominance of Appearance as the demand of all normal folks is considered at its true worth, your denture work will take on new life and there will be satisfactions that lie entirely outside the purely mechanical achievement of articulation and adaptation.

"How do they look?" is the first important question of every patient. If you have selected Trubyte Teeth that harmonize with the patient's features in outline and proportion, you may await the verdict with pleasurable anticipation.

If you will think of Trubyte Teeth as gems of porcelain, and will use the care in selection and arrangement that a jeweler uses when he arranges pearls, your appreciation of them and of your service will rise and carry your patient's appreciation to the same level.
